DEDICATION

Our Boys at the Front

WE, the class of 1919, thought it both fitting and an honor, since our country is at war and many of our boys are at the front, to dedicate this edition of the Lantern to them in recognition of their loyalty to their country.

These young men left their homes and friends and came to Susquehanna to gain an education in order that they might render service to their fellow-men and to civilization. It was in the beginning of what we thought a perfect day for civilization when the clouds of war began to roll and the steel of nations began to clash. As the darkness of slaughter came rolling on, the call came to the American people, "Come forth to the call of civilization and fight for democracy." Such was the call that came to our boys. Some had just begun their course, others had completed it while others were on the threshold of graduation. In loyalty to their country they answered the call, leaving their unfinished work behind.

They have enlisted in the many different branches of United States service. As we see this splendid band of young men marching forward, we can place our confidence and trust in them, that they will fight to the last to assist in the overthrow of Prussianism and autocracy. We wish them God's speed and when the clouds of slaughter and death shall roll away and democracy is triumphant; when the curtains of a new dawn are lifted, and we behold peace, we hope to see their faces again, and have them renew the fellowship, which they once enjoyed. But if they are not permitted to return, may they ever be remembered as the champions of Democracy and the defenders of their Native Country.

“Good Bye, Soldier Boys!”

THE lads that go now, high hearted as were they, go to bleed and do and die in a war that is fought under water, on the surface, and in the air above. They go to face the clouds of poisonous gas and the barrage of fire. They go in the face of all these, to give blow for blow, to pit American wits, initiative, and courage against these qualities in the servants of imperial ambition.

They go to do more. They go to prove that they are the soldiers of a great Republic whose people are civilized. They go to write it into history that humanity, mercy, and justice have their place in war as in peace. They go to victory, in which the despoilers of the homes of noncombatants shall be punished, the monsters who deflower women shall die wretchedly, the inhuman wretches who condemn noncombatants to slavery shall pass under the rod. They go to compel the Huns who have violated all law, divine and human, to drain to the dregs the bitter cup of sorrow they have pressed to the lips of the weak and the innocent.

They go, God's own avengers of the unspeakable suffering of the people of Belgium, Northern France, Poland, Serbia, Rumania, and Armenia. As they march, unseen in the clear air above them are the spirits of the American mothers and babies that perished in the roaring sea, murdered in the Lusitania. They go to cleanse the earth of the men who began by violating treaties and have progressed by violating the common promptings of humanity which have been held sacred even by the red Indians of America and the black tribes of Africa.

They are the armed guards of American honor, of the covenants of Almighty God. On this great mission we send them with every blessing, with every ascription of honor. They go to prove that this great Republic is great not only in material things, in its proud cities, its far-flung fields, and its laden orchards and purpling vineyards, but great in the ineffable things of the spirit, in the courage of its people and its purpose to fling high and far the banners of the best civilization created by man.

Greetings:—

To the faculty, alumni, friends and students of Susquehanna University the class of 1919 extend greeting.

To us has fallen the task of preparing this Lanthorn and it is our desire that it will meet with your approval. We have tried to portray faithfully every side of the life at Susquehanna. We hope we have been honest and impartial, still we ask you not to consider seriously everything that is said in this book. Some of it has been written merely to entertain and if "some shot sent by random finds lodgement in a tender spot" we beg you to think of it lightly and forget not that editors are but human and their knowledge limited.

Many of our classmates have answered the call of our country so that our class is no longer large in numbers and our task has not been easy. But we have done our best and if this book affords pleasure to our friends we will be amply repaid for all our labor. That the Lanthorn may grow in value as the years pass, is the earnest wish of the class of 1919.

Senior Class Prophecy

LAST night as I sat pouring over my texts for final examination, I turned my gaze to the blazing hearthfire to rest my tired eyes a moment. As I sat gazing, my thoughts turned to the happy events of old college days. Being tired, my mind was soon lost to Morphius and my eyelids gently closed until I was lost in the happy land of dreams. I seemed to have been changed to a creature of the spirit world—a fairy perhaps. Without any exertion, it seemed I was carried through the air, oh, so fast, with the power of stopping or journeying on instantly. I was traveling across large areas—a kind of trip around the world. With a sudden shock my blundering self was made to—

“Halt! Who goes there?” came the stern question.

“Friend!” I answered, and was conducted to the captain’s tent. This stern officer, my mind was slow in recognizing.

“Why, er-er-hello! Is that you, Woodie?”

“Yes. Salute me as a captain in our victorious army.” Astonished, I asked,

“Where are all the rest who enlisted with you?”

“All here and officers in this battalion. Let’s see. There is 1st Lieutenant Riden and 2nd Lieutenant Horton and Major Farrel and Quartermaster Swartz and Sargeant Harmon, and they sure are brave fellows. To-day we are celebrating our recent victory over the Kaiser. Tell the home folks how you found us.”

In an instant I was crossing great seas and oceans. Flying against the wind, my strength was failing fast, and when land was sighted I was powerless to go farther and just dropped into the cold water. I screamed and fainted. I regained consciousness to see bending over me the faces of Red Cross Nurses. They were the faces of Katharine Persing, Miriam Grossman and Mina Decker, the last wearing a doctor’s costume. They were as happy as I on finding a classmate and on inquiring they told me of their appointment by Uncle Sam to special Red Cross duty on the New England shores. And they continued further of what they knew about others of our class of 1918.

“Do you know that Faust is now president of the United States?” asked Mina, and Katie broke in—

“And Florence Lubold is taking a very active part in the work of Woman Suffrage. She is a renowned speaker and travels from coast to coast. In the book of travels, she has written, she describes having met Helen Holshue as head of some famous financial corporation in the southwest. And she tells, too, about the life and wonderful work of the renowned preacher, Rev. Williamson, D.D. He has had wonderful success in the ministry.”

After an hour of rest, Miriam returned and told me that she had just received a letter from Stella Schadel who is undertaking the fascinating parts of comic opera. And Katie had a letter from Evelyn Strohecker who has been married to the wealthiest copper magnate in the state of Montana, and she and her husband live in California. The letter told of the appointment of "Seibbie" Staib as Ambassador to France.

"Good luck to the candy boy!" I cried, and then asked, "And what of Dot?"

"She is the newly elected president of some woman's college. I think it is Bryn Mawr," Mina informed me.

My surroundings faded and I was again a winged creature, but soon I was dressed elegantly and seated in the midst of a great audience, joining in the applause for the actor whom I recognized to be Selin U'rich, the leading character in New York's grand opera. It was fine to see him in the place he had longed to be. A portly gentleman occupying a box seat had a familiar air.

"He," the lady on my left informed me, "is Mr. Wentzel, editor-in-chief of The New York Tribune. And the lady with him is Miss Herman—Eva Pauline Herman—author of 'Susquehanna' and 'Girls of Seibert Hall.'"

"Indeed!" I exclaimed aloud, awakening my sister who had also fallen asleep over review questions.

"Wake up, Kid!" she said, shaking my arm. And, realizing that I was awake, cried,

"I just had the funniest dream. Listen before I forget it. Are you ready?"

Senior Class History

FOR four years we have been held to a course of hard study by a vision, which is now realized,—the vision “graduation day.” How we all patiently worked and toiled, that this vision would some day become a reality. At times we felt as if the work was in vain, and we did it just because it was required. At these times the vision would be clouded and hazy, or we would not see it at all. Then as it would clear again, we would work with a will. Now when we face the day of days for us as Seniors, we see that what we have done has not been useless, but will signify so much to us in the future.

Now that we see no longer a vision, but reality, and we have reached our goal, nevertheless, we look back with mingled smiles and tears. Smiles for useless worries, and for the pleasures of college life; but tears for opportunities which passed never to return, and which we did not grasp; tears that we must so soon leave our Alma Mater which we have learned to love.

But these four short years, are years which we will ever remember and cherish long after the doors of dear old S. U. have closed for us. The friendships which were formed within her walls, will ever be held dear in the future, which we now face, and which we see through a rose tinted lense. As the years pass they will ever become dearer, and in many a dark hour be as a ray of sunlight.

When we entered college we numbered twenty-two, but time has changed the personnel of the class roll. We now number sixteen. Six of our loved classmates have been called to the defense of Old Glory. Keenly as we regret their loss, we feel proud that the class of 1918, can boast of so many who are willing to give their lives that Liberty may live.

Some new members had joined us, and we found in them loyal classmates, who aided us in the upholding of the standards of our cherished class. And now are ready with us to receive diplomas.

As we are about to embark on the sea of life, we hope that our Alma Mater can look upon us with pride. The many truths which we have learned, we will never forget, but they will inspire us on to be noble, courageous men and women. It is with a feeling of having endeavored to do our work to the best ability, and sorrow that we must now call our work completed, that we now bid you all a fond, Adieu.

JUNIOR

Junior Class History

YESTERDAY, a party while engaged in finding a trail to Mahanoy Summit, chanced to fall upon what proved to be a laden chest. Upon investigation it was found to contain a valuable manuscript, which read as follows:

In the tenth year of the reign of Carolus Thomas and in the eighth month thereof, a mighty proclamation was made throughout the land, calling upon the fathers of America to assemble their sons and daughters on the Campus Susquehannensis, where the wise and the learned of the land would endow them with knowledge and virtue. Upon their assemblage an enumeration was made and there were found to be thirty-six including old and young.

Carolus Thomas appeared before the assembly and strengthened their hearts, for they were weary with much journeyings: "My sons, be of good cheer; four years will you spend in our midst imbibing a spirit of knowledge and virtue. Ye shall be known for a season as Freshmen." And immediately after this the assembly separated and returned to their courts for a short rest, before they squelched the feeble attempt of placing "posters," by destroying them with paint and prints of '19, before the ink was dry. They tried to excuse their inertia by saying in a suggestive way that they were "laying off for the future," which they clung to until the last of September, when a multitude otherwise known as Sophomores were gathered together on the Fieldus Warnerus to dispute their progress. Immediately there was an onslaught and a coming together. The clash of arms and the war cries of the opposing parties were heard, but within a few minutes—'19 had buried 1918 as a pious old lady would wish to bury the evil spirit.

For sometime after this, all was in a state of rest, until a feast was planned in the adjoining villa (Freeburg). Politely and silently great preparations were made, but in vain. When the Sophomores were cheering over their success of changing the planned affair the Freshmen changed their site of celebration. "Soph's beaten at their own game," was heard throughout the land, all the chronicles of the day used these words for headlines.

During an entire year the Freshmen increased in stature and virtue. Their latent powers and faculties were quickly developed by feasting upon Greekorbian roots previously prepared and selected, by imbibing the wisdom of Cicero, Horace and Livy, by musing over the Collegiate Algebrin Formulae prepared by the most skeptical and critical of all ages and by the absorption of various other mysteries known only to those most wise and learned in the arts of life.

But time went on and another proclamation was made and a new host assembled on the Campus Susquehannensis. Once more Carolus Thomas appeared in the midst of those who had assembled at his former proclamation and sayeth unto them: "No longer shall ye wear the robes of Freshmen. Ye have been faithful in the little things, now enter upon the larger ones. Ye are no longer called Freshmen, but Sophomores. Hold ye your peace." Selah.

Sophomores reigned supreme over the Freshmen aggregation of greenness, desiring to be called Freshmen, until they were ready for the annual "tie-up." It was then the Sophs rushed in, but when they cast their eyes upon the class '20 they thought it beneath their dignity to rush the little ones and instead just calmly blocked the way. Sophomore banquet was arranged and carried out without any interference from the courts of rivalry. Again, Carolus Thomas appeared in their midst and said unto those: "No longer shall ye be grouped among those known as under classmen for ye are more worthy than they. Enter into a higher court, and be Juniors." Many answered, another call and are now subjects of our country, but to the few that remained, which was about one-half, he said, "another step and then ye shall be prepared to sail the great sea of life unhampered and well prepared by being in our midst." Selah.

Now the rest of the deeds of this host, how they carried off first honors in several events, during the celebrated Penn's Creek Massacre, how they enlightened their pathway with parties, receptions, etc., are too numerous to record, and how they displayed themselves on the gridiron no class will surpass.

Upon careful examination and comparison of the above manuscript with the history of Susquehanna University, it was found to be the history of the Junior Class of 1919. The manuscript is of great value and will be on record forever.

"Pop."

"Hully Gee." "Is that so?"

Like most other great men, "Shoaf" came from the country where he grew up on honest-to-goodness butter. He was rather backward and quiet when he first came, but he soon got over that and became the clown of the class. The first thing the class did was to place their small money bag in his hands, for they know an honest man when they saw him. Ever loyal to his class, he fought hard against the oppression of the Sophs, worked heroically to whip the Frosh into shape and befriended the last bunch of Freshmen in their struggle for wisdom in a strange land. Along religious lines, "Shoaf" is a leader. He is deeply conscientious and consecrated and inspires others by his very character. Not content to be a mere preacher in the homeland he has offered his services for the Foreign field. He is heroic not only morally, but physically and is grifty enough to stick to football, even though he has the annoying propensity of getting his face into somebody's way and wearing a discolored optic as a result. He is some society man, too. For his affections, after wandering around the country finally settled down right here at school. And the nice part about it is that she wants to be a missionary, too. "Pop" made his fortune in the "Jigger Shop Business" and is now living retired. He has the special ability of impersonating an inebriate under the influence. Yet "Pop" is highly respected by all and we feel confident that he will be a big success in the Foreign field, or wherever he may be.

"Dot," "Dottie,"

"Gh! Gee."

"Dottie"—a bright eyed little maiden—hails from the college town of Selingrove. Being a professor's daughter, she is naturally very studious. She is numbered among the brightest and never goes to class without her lessons fully prepared, and as a result never has a blank opposite her name on the roll.

Do not think that this studious little maid is always at her work, for such is not the case. When there is any fun in the neighborhood or any class "doings," this faithful member of '19 is always present. "Dot" has taken an active part in the Literary Society to which she belongs.

She is a calm, generous and modest little girl and holds in her heart a warm spot for each and every one of her classmates, also some out of the class—especially "Chubby."

Members of the class! You should feel highly honored in having "Dot" for a classmate. We predict for her a bright and prosperous future in whatever work she may take up.

"Speig."

"By Gosh."

"Speig" is one of the children of our class, although he is one of the tallest. It is impossible to take him seriously. In class he plays with his watch or his knife or anything he can get his fingers on, and delights in knotting the girls' coat sleeves. He asks the professors all sorts of impossible questions, just to take up the time. But he will outgrow these childish ways, we feel sure, when we consider what he was when we first knew him.

His most prominent characteristic is lack of dignity. Did you ever see him sit up straight? When he performs in Society you may be sure the criticism will be, "Mr. Speigelmire should approach the rostrum in a more dignified manner." But he does perform and Philo could not get along without this faithful musician, for he is a splendid cornetist.

Although we consider "Speig" one of our little (?) boys, it is surprising how many affairs of the heart he has had. He has traveled far and near to see his friends, and when he comes home his first question is, "Has she called up yet?"

He is also a thrifty, economical lad. Why, he has even been known to be exceedingly careful and attentive to pennies (one especially). "Speig" intends to go to medical school after which he expects to amputate people painlessly from their pocketbooks.

"Speig" is a good companion, and is liked by all. He is always ready to help whenever he can. When it comes to running an auto he is right there. We know that "Speig" will make good, and we certainly wish him success.

"Deedy."

"Gracious Me." "Believe Me."

Here she comes again in a hurry, but not in too big a hurry, but what she greets you with a pleasant smile and a cheery, "How j'n do?" The very expression on her face, shows sympathy and kindness. She has a strong character and a pleasing personality. Not a better, kind-hearted, little girl is to be found anywhere. It is one of the joys of her life to be useful, and help others. She is one of those fortunates who need not trouble herself about the restrictions or iron-clad rules of the girls' dorm. The students and especially our class will ever remember her for her kind hospitality.

"Deedy" is one of the smallest and most industrious girls of our class. When not engaged in her many studies (both in college and conservatory of music) she is knitting or busily engaged in some other fancy work. Her motto is, "Work while you can; for golden opportunities lost will never return." Her faithful study, and diligent work has not been in vain, for she is now quite artistic, both in painting and music.

With all her work she is jolly and ever ready to join her classmates in their amusements. If there is an opportunity to play some trick on a classmate, she is right there. She has many friends and frequently burns the midnight oil to prepare her lessons. "Deedy" is much interested in the class affairs and seems to have much business to transact with our worthy president, since he spends much of his time with her.

This little maid is much at home in her Auburn Six. Dumb animals are perfectly safe in their wanderings, for she would rather run her auto into a telegraph pole than hit any of them. In Y. W. C. A. she is a shining light. We would not be surprised to hear of this "Little Wonder" somewhere in far away China carrying the glad tidings of a christian land.

We are sure that some day this tiny midget will startle the world with her music and art.

"Yes, you midget, I really must say,

You're a troublesome comfort every day."

"Pappy."

!—:2x—..!*?

Be calm kind friend. He is not nearly as dangerous as you may imagine. We cannot help but feel proud of having such a person with his numberless capabilities join us. "Pappy" came to us while we were all in our freshness and innocence. When he first came here his favorite amusement was causing confusion in the dormitory. But as the greenness wore off and the years rolled by, he came to a fuller realization of his senses. And in order to look more dignified in the eyes of the fair sex, he decided to wear a mustache—he now possesses a good imitation.

"Pappy" is brighter than most of us. This is displayed when he is called upon in Psychology, for this is his hobby. He can recite it as well without study as most of us can with several hours of wearisome pondering. His motto is, "Recitation without study is good, but good recitation without study is better." In Athletics he has proven very efficient. He is noted for his clean playing and his efforts are directed more for the glory of Susquehanna than for himself.

His love affairs are very complicated and hard to diagnose. That he has been and still is subject to the wiles of the fair ones has been proven by the thrilling experiences he always enjoys when taking the co-eds out sleigh riding. It is nothing unusual to see "Pappy" running through the streets of Smbury at most any hour of the night, when most people prefer to be in bed, after upsetting his girl in the snow drifts, shouting, "Whoa Kitty, Whoa Kitty, Whoa."

From youth he has had high and lofty ideals concerning his life work, and our desire is that they may be realized.

"Chris."

"Oh! Ye Gods."

"Come a running, fellows," look who is here. This, gentle reader, is "Chris." Stately; why I should say, Queen Elizabeth at her best had nothing on this fair lady. "Chris" came to us at the beginning of our Sophomore year and we were all glad to welcome her as a member of our class. She is gentle as the dawn, when she is pleased, but like the raging waves of the ocean when anything troubles her.

To a person who does not know her, she might appear dignified, for this is one thing she likes to do and sometimes she gets away with it. Her class work is remarkable, for when called upon to recite, although she does not know anything whatever about the subject, she rises and by smiling at her professor, at the same time mumbling some unintelligible words, she succeeds in bewildering him and gets marked for a perfect recitation. "Chris" is usually very jolly and gay, but at times she gets very sad and her thoughts are far away. When she is in this state of mind she seeks comfort in singing "Till the Boys come home."

"Chris" likes to play basketball and plays center. On account of being so tall she is a good center and gets the "tip off" every time without jumping. She is very fond of reading and her favorite author is "Hoyte" while her favorite game is "matching pennies." She has quite a reputation as a gambler for many persons have been fleeced of their pennies by this shark. Oh! yes, we must not forget dancing, for at this she can outdo the "graces" themselves. We will now leave her knowing that we shall hear from her some time in the future.

"Scrooge."

"Oh! Katie."

This straight-spined, black haired, honest looking mortal entered our class the beginning of our Sophomore year. He took apartments in "Sleepy Hollow" where his aptitude of mind and irony gave rise to his name "Scrooge." He can be seen on the campus any time of the day with an arm full of books, nodding as he walks, but means nothing by that. His favorite walk over the campus is to Seibert Hall, the home of his delights, where pot-pie and after-dinner meets are cherished. For one so young a person would hardly suspect a deep-seated affinity for the female of the species, yet, alas, such is the case. Even though "Scrooge" takes campus between two and three hours each day, he is loyal to all the interests of the class and is an ardent Y. M. C. A. worker. His favorite hymn is, "Let Angels prostrate fall," which he without practice acted in pantomime at a prayer meeting in Dogtown.

"Scrooge" is a good clean cut christian young man, and we are sure he will continue to take an active part in Y. M. C. A. work. His father is a preacher, so of course it is natural that is his great ambition. Sometime we will hear of a great reform movement in Pittsburgh, headed by our classmate.

Who doesn't know Helen? She who never cuts a class, always occupies a seat in the student's row, and recites every time she is called upon. She has never been known to flunk, but is always a sure one for the profs to fall back upon after a number have answered "not prepared" from the back row. Outside of class Helen is a favorite with her many friends. Quiet, demure, modest—she is a relief from the noise and gush of the present day girl and always reminds one of those dear creatures who our grandmothers claim lived in their day, but are a rarity now. Her manner is always pleasing and she has never been seen in a rage. Perhaps she has a violent temper—but, if she has, it is always well concealed and from our observations we say no sweeter-dispositioned, more even tempered person ever existed.

Of course, Helen has views of her own, and is an independent thinker, as is shown by her debates and theses. But she quietly holds her own opinions and lets her associates express theirs without any interference.

Humor? Oh yes, Helen possesses a goodly supply of this, too. Her jokes are always well chosen and right to the point—though seldom heard aside from her edition of Philo. She is seldom the instigator of a plot, but always a good natured ally—never a kill-joy.

In affairs of the heart we believe Helen remains neutral, but it is hard to tell. Her quiet demeanor may be a cloak for concealing some violent flame.

Ah! Here we are at last, face to face with this quiet, yet very sociable being from the well known city of Klingerstown, where the people are said to exist on "sauer-kraut" and "pot-pie." So it is to this day—Schadel still has a strong affinity for Dutch eats and if he ever gets lost, you will sure find him some place eating "pbaked pbeans."

This young man, since his arrival five years ago, has taken an active part in all three of the major sports, but his talent in this line seems to find special vent in gymnastics and basketball.

Studies, did you say, well, he just devours everything in the book line that he can get his fingers on! During his first years here he has had a natural tendency to skip classes and seemed to think he pulled something over on someone, but now he has overcome this deficiency of the intellect by studying psychology, for he is usually in his place in the classroom. There is a reason for this, it is his affinity for the opposite sex, who figure largely in his spare time. However, the girls of Seibert hall are not well acquainted with him for he prefers school-marms from regions unknown and is in communication with five or six. When nothing interrupts he can be seen astride his beloved bike pedaling away towards Sweet Hope, where the "one" of his many friends abide.

Laying levity aside, here is one who is constantly striving to form good habits and be a christian through and through. He takes a part in all christian work, especially the Y. M. C. A. With such perseverance there is no reason why he should not make a success in the medical profession, which he contemplates studying when through at Susquehanna.

Behold our Mollie, the modern girl with the ancient name, the happiest, jolliest, best-natured girl to be found. Mollie has been with us all through our course and her cheery smile has brightened the toilsome pathway.

She is by nature very "studious" and never comes to class with her lessons unprepared, and is never guilty of bluffing. In all kinds of weather she can be seen tramping out from town with an armful of books and always in a rush. Never is she late!

In class affairs she is always ready to do her part and when it comes to a feed she is always a booster. The only thing she likes better than one feed is two feeds. She is a ready and willing worker and can be depended upon at all times.

Although she claims to be a militant suffragist and man-hater, yet she has been known to have had several "flames." She is quite popular with the fellows in spite of her anti-masculine attitude, largely on account of her exceeding good humor.

Though she is preparing for the teaching profession, we prophesy that she will forget her "bachelor" ideas and capture some lucky fellow and teach along the lines of home life before many years have passed by. Whatever she does we wish her success.

It was in the fall of 1915 this small piece of humanity came to Susquehanna. In fact, before her time our class did not exist. She is a bright, cheerful girl, ever ready to greet her friends with a smile, and through it, has won the love and respect of her fellow-students. When she first came to our portals she was bashful and quiet. But what wondrous changes time and environment have wrought! Laying aside all her bashfulness, she entered into the spirit of college life with a vim, which she has kept throughout her course, and she has always taken a deep interest in every movement which had for its aim the betterment of college or class conditions.

Mary grew to be quite athletic of which fact we as a class are very proud. On the basketball floor she has taken part in many hard fought contests and has won the praise of the entire student body for the brilliant manner in which she played. She has not spent her time in vain in the classroom. She knows some Latin, a little French and has won some laurels in mathematics. She is exceedingly conscientious in all her studies, not even using a pony for her languages. Mary has well learned the adage, "Love many and trust few." Therefore her love affairs are many and varied, ranging from preps to seniors, although we believe that she is most loyal to her own class. We bespeak much success for her through her life's journey.

The subject of this sketch came to Susquehanna from the city of "Brotherly Love" when quite small, having at that time three older sisters to care for her and see that her lessons were prepared and above all see that she reported for recitations. When our class was first organized she enrolled as one of its members and proved to be very loyal to the class.

This young maiden is as true as steel and has a quiet and unassuming disposition which has won for her the love and respect of all those who know her. She is not any too fond of study and her leisure moments, which are many, are spent in crocheting, knitting and entertaining. As for her love affairs, we know very little about them, but we suppose she has some at her home, although there are no visible manifestations of such affairs. She profited by her Freshman year's experience, and we do know that she does not have the smashing of hearts of all the bashful swains about S. U. in view. Her highest ambition is to become a minister's wife. She does not want to teach very long, for all teachers are likely to become "old maids."

We are sure that she will succeed in life just as well as in her other undertakings, because her sunny disposition will win for her the love and admiration of all wherever she goes.

"Doc." "Phiz."

"Oh! Gosh." "Is that right?"

Here we have our medicine man, a kind hearted, trusting, gullible, esteemed youth from Billtown. This amiable personage joined our class in the Sophomore year and missed the hazing which he needed.

"Phiz" is a real sport. He can work his pedals around the track about as fast as any man at school, and his speed was very valuable on the informal team where he had a regular berth. His football career was noted for the fact that he always required five helmets, three pair of shoes, seven jerseys, and four shoulder pads from which to select before he was equipped for a game. He gets around the floor real well in basketball, but he is an artist in what he calls the real sport—hunting. Being a typical Bastian, he keeps two rifles and five revolvers in his room and occasionally makes an armed attack against the creatures of the wild. Last fall he shot one squirrel, but his deer hunting trip was unsuccessful.

He can almost play a trombone and fairly delights to agonize with his vocal organs. Yet we must admit that he is very conscientious, is a good diligent student and is well liked by his classmates. He is a man of deep feelings and heroic principles. His life will be devoted to the relief of human sufferings at home, in the Red Cross Service or as a medical missionary, Y. M. C. A. and prayer meeting always find him present. Yet candor compels us at this point to record with regret some of his failings. He is a very heavy eater, occasionally being satisfied at the expense of his table companions. If he did not have to visit his beloved in Billtown so much he might be a resident student. He delights in physical encounters with his equals, but inferiors as bedbugs he abandons in disgust.

"Phiz" is a good scout and we are sure he will make his mark in life.

Behold the Queen of our class! This is what we tried to call her. There she goes with her arms full of stored up knowledge and her cheerful face ever ready to greet her friends with a smile. She is a little bashful, but when it comes to playing a trick on some one, she is present. She is very studious, but there are times when a little bluffing comes in very nice. Freshmen find in her a kind, considerate friend, one who is ready to assist and help them allay that feared and fatal disease known as heart-sickness and sometimes home-sickness in college life. We also find her interested in the Red Cross work of our country. Why? Because, in some of the fellows who have gone out from our Alma Mater to fight for the nation's cause in the Great War, she finds special interest.

Her favorite form of greeting her classmates during the day is, "How are you now." She fully determines to make the most of what Susquehanna has to offer. Her voice is somewhat like that of an owl, and when it comes to debating her speech is clear and forcible.

Undoubtedly the class of nineteen-nineteen will send forth in this maiden one who will achieve success either in her school room or in her kitchen.

"Cheorche Kessner," as he calls himself, is another member of our class who can boast of Pennsylvania-Dutch blood. To this blood George is indebted for many of his characteristics. He is slow, phlegmatic and backward, but he is a plodder and works hard. He is as diligent a student as many and much more diligent than some at Susquehanna, although his recitations do not always display it. George navigates to school on a bicycle, which beast of burden sometimes mysteriously gets out of wind and Georgie walks. This worthy gentleman also came out for informal football for a while and the inconvenience that practice caused him was the only reason he did not continue. His weight was much felt at center and after someone explained the signal to him, he could wade right through the other team. He might have gotten a regular berth on the Informals if he had stuck and been able to get the signal quick enough. His father's store engages his time on Saturday nights. Being a vulnerable human, he at times falls for a woman who then gets a ride in the Gessner Lizzy. Unfortunately, George does not get in on the many college activities. Hence his Dutch brogue is known only in the classroom where the profs delight to teach him to say "vinegar" instead of "winegar," and "very vivacious" instead of "wery wiwacious." George is characterized by his mass of black hair which waves like a wheat field in a wind storm and "hiss winegar in hiss wituals." Otherwise he isn't such a bad fellow and usually has little to say.

"Lottie."

"Golly-O." "Your Ear."

This blue eyed maiden hails from the city of "Brotherly Love." That we are fortunate in having Lottie in our class is expressing it mildly. From the time her smiling face was first seen in our midst her clamorous musical voice and rippling laughter have been heard at all points of the campus. She is a good student, but certainly does not believe in over study, and therefore possesses a good healthy complexion. She never blushes except when "there is a reason," and it is strange how often the "reason" comes upon such a modest flower nestling along in a shady covert beside a babbling brook. "Lottie," however, is none of this kind, for the stream must be quiet while she does the babbling.

During her freshman year she was the faithful secretary of our class, but since that time she has been very much interested in the class of '20. It is true that she spends much time in compustry, but chemistry would be very lonely to her if it were not for her—partner.

"Lottie" has her faults like many more, but we expect to see her settle by her chirping voice when she sings, "I love you truly" and "Where! oh! where has my sailor boy gone."

"Lottie" has her faults like many more, but we except to see her settle down very early in life and live very happy ever after. With best wishes to Lottie.

But he soon convinced everyone that although small, he had enough gray matter to enter the Freshman Class, and his faculty for solving weird math problems established him as a prodigy.

We know very little of his love affairs, as he does not seem inclined towards the gentler sex, but rumors have come to us that several times he has had the ill fortune of some other person marrying his best girl. Perhaps this is what makes him shy around the girls. One of Boscoe's favorite pastimes is to tell you about his thriving town back home, its population, business facilities and of its wonderful opportunities. Being very quiet, he spends most of his time in his room reading his beloved "Top Notch," but when an intruder bent on rough-housing presents himself Roscoe is not at all idle. In athletics he is nonchalant and non-dexterous, but as yet he has not fallen apart. He is a steady worker and those are the people who get along.

In class work she distinguished herself as a debater, having that power to convince her audience of that which they do not believe. She is a good reader and has many literary talents, but is chiefly known for her masterly composition—a love sonnet—"It Is Night and I Am Lonely." Besides being a good student, she has a winning personality and many learn to love her. She has always been known as a heart smasher, but when she becomes a little older and "the boys come home" she will make a good housekeeper and minister's wife, at least we feel safe in predicting such a future for her. Jess is conscientious, unselfish, independent and of a very affectionate nature. She is always present in body—but absent in mind.

He seems to be getting something from the course just the same. When the door opens, everybody knows it's Harry, because of his step. When he is walking with the boys he is unnoticed because he is rather small of stature; but when in company with his most intimate friends you need not prove his existence for his voice betrays him, "Harry on the spot."

If you look at his head you would expect nothing, but start something and he is right there, ready to solve any problem that may arise, not only in school work but any other problem that confronts students. Get him telling his experiences among the opposite sex and then good-bye study for a while. He believes in the "laugh-and-grow-fat" theory. When you talk to him about being a little man he always says, "Good goods are often put up in small packages," which seems very true in his case.

She came to us several years ago from the notable town of Blain with a determination to make a success of her work, and she has done it nobly. In elocution, singing, and playing the piano Lee is always ready to do her part. As a student of elocution we find her at her best. By means of her oratorical training she is capable of impersonating many different characters on the stage. Leah is a consistent worker for the Y. W. C. A. and through her untiring efforts has done much for the interests of this association at Susquehanna.

Contrary to custom, this fair lady has little to say, but I think we know the reason. A year or so ago she journeyed to Philadelphia and there met the idol of her heart, a young doctor. She immediately became the victim of a severe attack of Cupidic heart trouble from which she has never recovered. Now it's sad to say, this sweetheart has gone to war and left her pining here all alone.

Although Leah may consider Susquehanna a good college, she does not think it contains sufficient material to prepare her for life's work and intends furthering her studies at Emerson's School of Oratory, upon the completion of her college course here, after which she expects to teach.

Make an effort to win her and you will find her a friend worth the having.

"Scribble" is undoubtedly one of the most energetic fellows in the institution. It is his skill and energy that makes it possible for that valuable little weekly, "The Susquehanna," to arrive in your mail-box each Tuesday morning, for he is the very capable editor. But after all, literature is not his hobby, for in his idle moments you will find him working some problem in trigonometry or surveying. He especially delights in solving these problems for some of the fair sex. Yes! Here is his greatest weakness. When the dying embers glow, he sits before the fire with a pipe between his lips, and dreams of the time, he hopes not far away, when he may not sit there alone. He is an affectionate fellow—"well, who isn't?" At any rate Scribble loves to take a sleigh ride on a nice cold winter night, with bright stars and a crescent moon and sitting beside him—something very near the realization of his pipe dreams.

Whether Frank will make mathematics his life work or take up the ministry we cannot yet decide, though we understand that he "hit the sawdust trail" during his Freshman year.

All, did I say? All but one. She can sing quite "Magnoliously supermatically" and her rendition of her part of the vocal duet, "O little Town of Bethlehem," is entirely unique.

Work and Steinie go together as well as molasses and ice cream. Her sister inmates of the Dormitory testify to her commendable activity in the Y. W. C. A., and all loyal Clonians are witnesses to her unceasing efforts to make the programs successful.

Her laugh is an inspiration and the way her eyes twinkle teasingly is enough to make any Altoona athlete yield homage. We have reason to believe that she has a number of faint heart admirers among the students and we know positively that she is well liked everywhere.

We prophesy that Steinie will settle down early in life, since she is not working for her degree in the conservatory, as her classmates, but we hope that she will rank high in the musical world.

Junior Class Poem

It was only a couple of years ago
There came to old S. U.
A jolly good bunch of girls and boys,
Inexperienced and green, 'tis true.
The reason they came—to prepare for fame
In the halls of old S. U.

Their lessons learned and their freshness gone,
They discarded their emerald hue;
And as lordly Sophs they required for the Frosh
The things all Freshmen must do,
Thus handing down to future studes
Traditions of old S. U.

But loud was heard the country's call
To fight for the red, white and blue;
And the call came clear, resounding
To the halls of old S. U.
To many a student, loyal
To U. S. as well as S. U.

And that is the reason the orange and black
Is worn by only a few.
Yet the boys at the front and the boys here at school
To '19 are loyal and true;
And the boys at the front and the boys here at school
Still heartily love old S. U.

For amid shot and shell and the terrors of war
Where men dare to die and do,
Or at school where is peace and study and work,
Their hearts will ever beat true.
For the moon never beams without giving them dreams
Of '19 and old S. U.

Sophomore Class History

WITH others of the loyal sons and daughters of Susquehanna, we, the class of 1920, again appear on Susquehanna's Campus. But alas, sad it is to say not all of our members were permitted to return.

Due to the grim monster "war" our glorious ranks have been reduced to about one-half their former size. But we came back to make the year a success and with a bound we leaped into its activities with a zeal unsurpassed. Our first meeting was held under the sneaking shadows of the Science Hall, just as the sun was casting its last gleam of joy and light across the western hill tops, on the evening of September, 20th. As the twilight gave way into darkness with brows flashed high with youthful ambition, we met and pledged anew our loyalty to our old school and the cause of higher education.

During the first night of our arrival the proclamations were posted. On these proclamations were printed the commandments which were to guide the Freshmen through their childhood days. A few days later the Freshmen thinking they would start something, by painting their numerals. Our class was alert, and at early dawn very few of their numerals were to be seen. In accordance with the ruling passed by the upper classmen, both classes met on Warner Field the second Thursday of the term. Being outnumbered, we were badly defeated, for the first time in the history of our class. But with high hearts we again set out and all has gone well. Our class has also been well represented in athletics.

As it is customary to publish a calendar, our class took up the matter and put out one, which we feel sure has met with approval among the students, alumni and friends.

Since our ranks are much reduced by war we will ever keep before us, our motto, "Acti labores juvenidi," and with the hope of a larger and greater Susquehanna after the dove of peace shall have made her abiding place in this fair land of ours, we shall keep pressing onward and upward throughout the year ever gaining, still pursuing and always striving to attain our goal, and satisfying the restless fires of ambition burning within our breasts.

Sophomore Class Poem

O, let the mind her slumbers break,
Let thought be quickened and awake,
Awake to see
How soon school life is past and gone
And the end comes softly stealing on,
How silently.

What cunning skill, what curious art,
Do our boys in the various games impart,
At times?
Was it the result of heavy weight?
No, but no pen can describe our gait,
On lines.

The jingle, jingle of the merry bells,
Mingled with laughter and college yells
On banquet night,
Have filled us with a happy chime
That will ring in our ears through endless time
Oh, perfect delight!

There are no leaders, we work abreast,
Striving each day to do our best,
This happy few,
Would that when we reach the end
The line will have no break or bend
To start anew.

And may we be monarchs powerful and strong,
Famous in history, famous in song,
With laurels plenty,
Then as each goal of fame we pass
May we reflect with pride on the class
Of nineteen-twenty.

Freshman Class History

IN order that others may know of the glories of class '21, let us allow our minds to wander back in a retrospection of the notable incidents which are associated with our freshmen days at Susquehanna. According to precedence long established, the Sophomores sought to teach us concerning the paths we must tread in our infancy, and upon our arrival various rules and regulations were there to greet us. We soon organized choosing for our colors, purple and orange, and for our motto, "virtutis in actione consistit," which is one worthy of the noblest in the battle of life.

As a result of this organization, we were more ably fitted to cope with our over lords (The Sophs) and indeed, this was proven by the incidents of our first night at Susquehanna. For that night, when all who might be hostile to our purpose had retired, we sallied forth from our rendezvous armed with paint and brushes, and before the sleepy Sophs were aware, nearly all of the proclamations had been effaced, while our own '21 was quite prominent.

Now passing over many reminiscences, there stands forth a recollection of the traditional Fresh-Soph tie-up. With almost evenly matched sides, the two classes met on Warner field for this contest for supremacy. Both classes fought hard, but by and by the Sophomores were carried across the line, and when the pistol sounded, the score was 11-0 in favor of the Freshmen. These are notable events, and they foretell what the class of '21 will do in the future. As the sun in all its glory slowly creeps up from beyond the eastern hills in the newly created dawn to begin her course, so was our beginning of college life. Now, may our career in college be as the course of the sun through the sky in a perfect day. And although there may be clouds through which we must force our path, let us remember that when those clouds pass away it is then that our symphony of life plays in more splendid harmony than before.

With this noble beginning as the foundation, let us build to great heights the edification of true manhood and womanhood, and with an impulse from on high attain fame not as the world knows fame but as it is judged by the judge of all. So that when the last of our college days come nigh, they may be compared to the setting sun, a glowing forth in undying splendor, the finish and goal of a course well run. And as the sun slowly disappearing in the western sea, seems to look back at the earth left behind, may we be able to look back with many happy recollections to our Freshmen days at our college, the college of all, old Susquehanna.

Sub—Freshman Prophecy

ONE bitter cold December night when the winds were whistling through the pines and creeping through all cracks and corners, and the little snow flakes were playing hide and go seek, I was curled up in a large chair watching the coals on the grate. One by one they burned to ashes and fell apart. In my mind I first saw a lot of little colored children playing leap-frog and when they became too boisterous a door swiftly opened and a head peeped out of the mission house and there appeared a tall slender gray-haired peaked-faced old missionary. Upon looking close I recognized my former classmate, Jane Botsford.

As I traveled on with great speed, there appeared before me beautiful pasture lands with great herds of fine cattle and large flocks of sheep pasturing on a hill-side. I gazed still farther and saw a fine large brick farm-house surrounded with a beautiful lawn. As I came nearer, I recognized Adan Bohner walking across the porch, then several children came out of the house followed by their mother, Katherine Ayer. While talking with these old chums of mine, I noticed a familiar figure coming down the road. As he came nearer I saw that it was Lewis Pawling, a prominent lawyer from New York.

After leaving my old friends, I seemed to travel faster than the winds, until I came to an auditorium where I heard sweet strains of music. Upon entering, I noticed upon the stage a tall stately looking fellow, playing a violin. When the selection was over this stately gentleman went to take his seat, but on account of his awkwardness he missed it. At once I recognized him as Teddy Moller.

Leaving Teddy, I traveled miles and miles until I saw in the distance a church steeple. When I came to the church I heard the organ playing, so I thought I would go inside. As I was entering the door I noticed in the pulpit a very familiar person dressed in a ministerial garb, who was no other than Rev. Bossler. When the choir appeared in the choir-loft another familiar face appeared, and when the music pealed forth a fine tenor voice was heard and I at once knew it was Lloyd Bohner. Upon still closer observation I found the organist to be Clyde House and the sexton to be Hoffman.

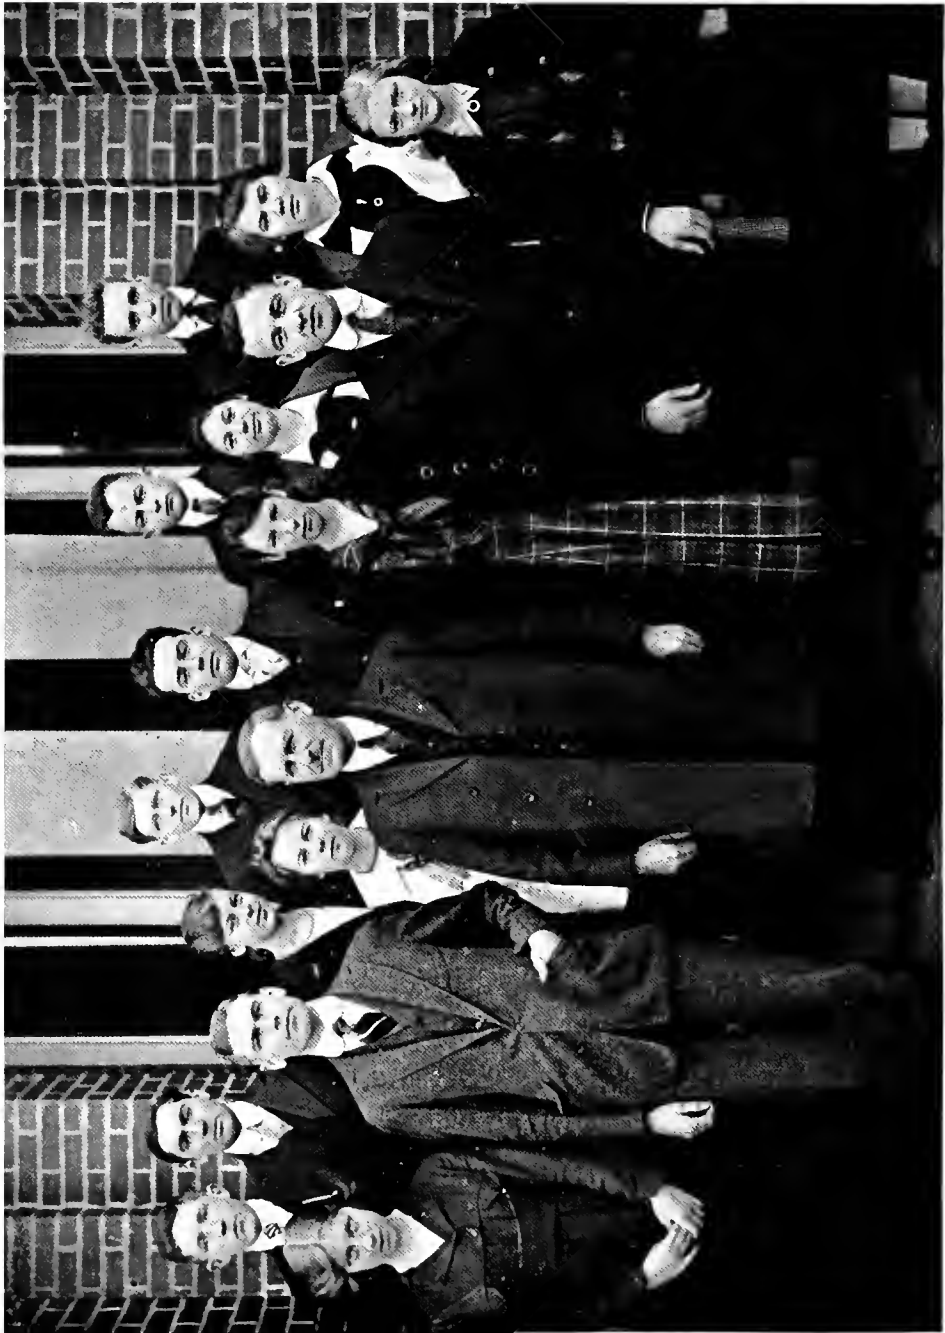

About this time I felt someone pulling my ear. I rubbed my eyes a little and looked around. I found that breakfast was ready and I was only dreaming.

Young Men's Christian Association

AT the beginning of the academic year '17-'18 the good ship "Y. M. C. A." set sail on its annual voyage across the ever tempestuous sea of college life. But a storm had arisen and the dark clouds of war had already begun to precipitate its destructive rain and hail and the winds shrieked and wailed. The high seas had at the very beginning of the storm, with one stroke, washed overboard the captain and many of the officers and crew. Little wonder that those on board were disheartened. But something had to be done and the passengers and crew met in the saloon to pray and select a new crew. With this they took heart. The ship rolled and tossed but her valiant captain and stalwart crew kept her in her course. Not without great difficulty and danger, however, for in doing this another member of the crew was washed overboard and with him the ship's log which he had with him at the time. Another was chosen to take his place and the ship continued. A few of the passengers who ventured on deck were also carried off by the high waves and were mourned. At times the storm moderated sufficiently to spread some sail and make some speed and she is now making some headway although the rain is still falling somewhat and the waves are still high and darker clouds are impending. But we feel confident that she will reach her destination.

The year was opened with the annual Y. M.-Y. W. mixer in Seibert Hall. Of course all of the old students were there to enjoy the evening and many of the new men and co-eds presented themselves to get acquainted. Thus cheered, the officers of the Y. M. C. A. set to work. A whirlwind campaign ended with practically a 100% membership. All year good speakers have been secured for the meetings and the attendance has always been encouraging.

At the very beginning, the Y. M. C. A. inaugurated and encouraged prayer meetings to be held in the different sections of the dormitory and in the fraternity houses each week. This has been a blessing to many a student and has brought him in closer Christian contact with the real character of his fellow students.

Later during the year the local organizations felt that they should do something for the Y. M. C. A. war fund. The committee set the goal at $350.00 and in a big campaign occupied a morning with speeches, music and soliciting. The Y. W. C. A. helped nobly in this work and when the results were counted the goal had been more than doubled. It had reached $710.00!

During the winter term the cabinet arranged a series of lectures. Dr. Thos. C. Blaisdell lectured on "Today's Patriotism"; Rev. C. P. Bastian, "My Boy and I"; Dr. Byron W. King, "Pay up or Quit." These were splendid lectures and were thoroughly enjoyed by the whole student body.

The rooms were papered and the floor painted during the fall term and all students enjoyed the privileges and comforts of the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

Thus this department is doing its part to keep the students true to the principles that they were taught at their mother's knee. It brings some pleasure and encouragement to the boys away from home, dispelling gloom and reminding them of home and God. Let all loyal students join in a rousing "A-N-X-A" for the Y. M. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A.

OF the vast number of organizations of the college community the most beneficial and helpful to the student body in general is the Christian Associations. The Y. W. C. A. is an organization whose mission is not only to save stranded souls, but also to work out a great principle—helping them to develop body, mind, and spirit. The Association does not only have an influence on its members at school but ideals and good habits are formed while here, which last for a lifetime. It is often in these meetings that many receive their religious training to go out from the college halls to take their places as leaders in religious work both at home and abroad.

During the past year the Y. W. C. A. of Susquehanna has steadily advanced. The regular meetings were well attended. The services during the World's Week of Prayer were very helpful and inspiring. Social service work is ever gaining favor with the members. The little tots in the rural communities in which our activities are centered eagerly await the coming of the girls. We feel sure our efforts are amply repaid when we see these smiling faces around us.

Our most worthy president attended the summer conference at Eagles Mere. The report brought back was both interesting and inspiring. It gave our Association a better knowledge of the work done by other Associations, and opened up a broader field of usefulness to us.

In the great world-wide campaign our Association contributed $165.70 toward the Students' Friendship War Fund. We made a big sacrifice, in order that the conditions might be made better in the camps, in the prison camps and in the armies.

We hope that the influence of the Y. W. C. A. may rule our lives and that we may look back to the record of the past, and say, "The Y. W. C. A. of Susquehanna had a lasting Christian influence upon me, and helped to make my life worth while. Long may the Young Women's Christian Association of Susquehanna continue her splendid work, and be a life saving station for the young women.

In keeping with the true spirit of Susquehanna the students met under the leadership of a field secretary of the I. P. A. and organized a local organization. Ever patriotic, the student body again showed their patriotism by enlisting against the greatest enemy of the nation, strong drink. The organization was perfected and plans laid for aggressive work. The faculty was petitioned to inaugurate a prohibition study class. Prohibition speeches were made before both the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. and on the literary society floors. Wartime work and the rearrangement of the college schedule rendered it almost impossible for the local association to hold meetings or do much extra work. Every member realizes the importance of national prohibition at all times and especially in war time, and are ever ready to serve their country by doing their best to rid the country of its greatest curse, the liquor traffic.

The Fisher

A man sat by the river fishing.
For bass and catfish he was wishing.
His quiv'ring bobber quickly sank.
The fish came flying to the bank
With frantic flops and swishing.

A student's life is much like fishing,
For useful wisdom he is wishing.
His hook must sink deep in the stream
Where fish of knowledge flash and gleam,
The ones for which he's fishing.

Thus, if we manage well our fishing,
We get the things for which we're wishing

If we use the bait of honest toil,
Our bobber sinks, and on the soil
Lies the fish for which we're wishing.

Athletics

College athletics have been greatly disrupted during the past year, by prevailing war conditions. Susquehanna with its limited supply of athletic material has suffered greater demoralization perhaps than any other college of its size in the state. Every member of the 1916 football squad with the exception of two men, volunteered, and were accepted for army service.

With virtually no resources upon which to draw it was decided by the athletic council to disband intercollegiate sports for this season.

Realizing the necessity of training and developing the material at hand, efforts have been made along this line by inaugurating interclass contests in the major sports.

By careful management however during the lull in athletics the debt has been greatly reduced and the association stands ready to start the ensuing year with virtually no handicap.

Under the coaching of athletic director Wingard a co-ed team of remarkable ability was developed, and by its numerous victories attracted state-wide attention.

During the past two years, under the able direction and coaching system of Edgar R. Wingard, Professor of Physical Education, Susquehanna has forged to the front ranks in intercollegiate athletics, although temporarily inactive, yet when the harassing conditions of the present have subsided, Susquehanna will once more take her place in the world of sports.

At Night

Between the evening and morning
While darkness rules the earth,
Students, their lessons scorning,
Seek laughter and joy and mirth.

'Tis then the Freshman shivers
And starts at every noise,
While Sophs steal fruit and flivvers
And do other pranks of boys.

'Tis then the Junior cusses
And smokes so he won't feel blue
And the haughty Senior fusses
And loves a girl or two.

The Sophs then seize some Freshman
And pound him black and blue.
And rats come from their hiding
And eat a half a shoe.

'Tis then the bookworm studies
And piles his daily grind.
While others attend the movies
And seek to rest their mind.

Thus through the long night's darkness
The Frosh raise Cain and run,
And Sophs and Juniors and Seniors
Reject their work for fun.

Aint it a Grand an' Glorious Feelin' when

You go to get all dolled up and can't find your clothes?
You have your Greek out all week and aren't called on and don't have it out on Friday and are called on?
You get cast out by Mrs. Hobart?
You discover that you have been running around with a "Rube" sign on your back?
You find your room thoroughly fumagated with lymberger cheese?
You find a skeleton in your bed?
You get a box of candy from your girl and somebody steals it?
You and your girl both wipe up the sidewalk?
You are going out among 'em and get ducked?
You suddenly meet Prexy with a cigarette in your mouth?
You get a letter from home with out any money in?
You loose at strip poker and have to wear a dress four inches too short to school all next day?
A Prof discovers you loving up a girl in the library?
You read the Lanthorn?

I forgive the gny who ducked me
And who knocked me in the dirt.
But not forgive the laundry man
Who tore my other shirt.

FRESHMEN IMPRESSIONS.

Selinsgrove—H. H. A.
The campus—A place to play marbles.
The office—A torture chamber.
The girl's dorm—A beautiful, mystic, unexplored house of embarrassment.
The boy's dorm—The Belleview Stratford.
"Pa" Horton—A guardian angel.
Sophs—The devil's imps.

Many a man who is most lavish with his talk has to take it back, slightly damaged.

Cheer up. The fool who rocks the boat may live to ride in an aeroplane.

WANTED.

"Scibby" Stail—"A house keeper well built to take care of suits."
Jess McCool—"A man. No references required."
"Crook" Decker—"Restrictions removed."
"Phiz" Bastian—"A divorcee."
Sam Kornman—"A horse for Livy."
Tom Weible—"A Dot."
"Boscoe" Treaster—"The guy that married my sweetheart."
"Arty" Warner—"An island."
Schadel—"My watch."
Bert Lutton—"A new overcoat."
"Teddy" Moller—"A better understanding (feet)."
A Bucket—"For the end of Phiz's trombone."

JUNIOR LOGIC.

Necessity is the mother of invention.
Bread is a necessity.
An engine is an invention.
Therefore: Bread is the mother of an engine.

Prof. Brungart—"How would you express 'a man with large feet'?"
Miss Schultz—"Accusative of extent of space."

THE END IN VIEW.

Lee Smith—"Why do you let him call you by your first name, Bernice?"
Bernice Swartz—"I want to encourage him to help get rid of my last name."

A black goose may lay a white egg, but a wild goose will never lay a tame egg.

Patience is fine if it keeps a man working. But it isn't much good if it keeps him sticking to a crap game.

Inquisitive stude—"Why is he running around with that lantern?"
Informed stude—"His other lantern was smoked so badly that he had to light that one to find the other one in the dark."

Frosh—"The war will be over in two weeks."
Soph—"Whence this prophecy?"
Frosh—"My brother enlisted and I never know him to stick to any job longer than two weeks."

Senior—"What is the difference between the man who has seen Niagara Falls and the man who hasn't?"
Freshman—"! ? !" (denotes huge anger).
Senior—"One has seen the mist and the other has missed the scene."

Where Do We Go From Here?

Ask Pappy and Bill Janson.

Gortner—"Down to the Prof's to get my lesson."

"Phiz" Bastian—"To Williamsport."

Shoaf—"To 34-Y."

Schadel—"To Sweet Hope."

"Mum" Seel—"To bed."

"Dot" Rearick—"Thump."—(on the basketball floor).

Rothfuss—"To join the I. T. K.s."

"Woof" Baer—"The front entrance of the dining hall."

"Prexy"—"To the conservation meeting."

Prof. Jack—"To hunt German spies."

THE 1919 FORD.

A little gas, a little oil, a little wire they call a coil.

A piece of tin twelve foot broad, nailed together makes a Ford.

A car for young, a car for old, there is no better auto sold,

Though made of wire, hot air and tin, it wears like iron and runs like sin.

TOO MUCH LOVE.

Earnest Cassler—"Darling, I think of you every moment in the day."

Charlotte Weaver—"Law sakes, Earnest, give some attention to your studies or you'll get expelled."

Dr. Talcott Williams has said: "Providence, at a time like this, is like a householder who brings forth treasures new and old. We have rediscovered our patriotism. We have rediscovered our capacity for service. We have rediscovered our faith."

Perhaps to no body of men does this apply more truly than the boys who have enlisted. Daily facing great issues, they know the need of an abiding faith.

Two books have been especially prepared for enlisted men.

The Army & Navy Service Book

With hymns and services taken from our own Common Service Book, and adapted to military use. Bound in khaki or navy blue cloth, it is made just to fit the pocket of the uniform. Price single copies 20c postpaid; $2.00 a dozen.

Flag Testament

A special edition of the New Testament, only half-inch thick, but printed in clear, readable type. Bound in khaki or navy blue cloth with our flag in gold, on the cover. Single copies sell for 50c. Easy to slip into the pocket of the uniform.

Send these books to the men you know who have enlisted and are at the camps here, or "over there." We will be glad to fill your orders promptly.

Modern office equipment is tending more strongly than ever to the use of Flat Top Desks. A good desk which embodies the equality of excellence may show resemblance to one which does not possess it, therefore, in determining your purchase remember that many of the most essential features are not superficial, but are found beneath the surface, and then resemblance ceases and values are unequal.

Montgomery Desks combine appearance with quality of excellence which combination guarantees the dealer and consumer the highest degree of satisfaction. When in need of a desk inquire for the kind made by

Ambition

If I were a cobbler, I'd make it my pride,

The best of all cobblers to be;

If I were a tinker, no tinker beside

Should mend an old kettle like me.

But whether a tinker, or whether a lord,

Whatever my station may be,

Determined to play second fiddle to none,

I'll climb to the top of the tree;

Let who will be second, the first

I'm determined to be.
